

Team Newfield,

Happy New Year! I want you to know the integration efforts for our merger with Encana are progressing very well and we are moving toward the expected closing of this important transaction in mid-February.

Since we announced the proposed merger at the beginning of November, crude oil prices have declined and E&P equity valuations industry-wide are seeing record lows. Our leadership team and board of directors believe this volatility will continue and may increase over time. I want to assure you we have confidence that the combined company's multi-basin portfolio and enhanced free cash flow generation will enable us to more effectively navigate volatility risks and the merger will unlock significant value synergies—validating the rationale behind the merger.

Today, I would like to provide you with some important information. I realize I probably will not be able to address every question you may have, but you can expect additional communications to come over the next several weeks. We are committed to sharing any information we have with you as quickly as possible. Included within this note, you will find some news on leadership announcements as well as a few upcoming dates as we head toward the finish line of the merger.

Although we are operating as separate organizations, our integration team, with the help of many others, has been working hard to ensure Encana has everything it needs to be successful. I appreciate all that you have done to ensure Newfield is continuing to execute at a high level. Earlier this week, we issued an external release on our fourth quarter production and year-end proved reserves. You can find the updated filing stating our results on our external website. This was a great report. We announced our fourth quarter production would likely be at the high end of our external guidance ranges. We expect to add approximately 100 MMBOE to our proved reserves, and expect to end 2018 with total company reserves of approximately 780 MMBOE—up 15% over last year.

Encana is still in the early days of defining the new organization and many decisions have not yet been made. Although we expect additional leadership positions will be determined in the coming weeks, here are some key initial appointments that will take effect following the closing of the transaction.

- Matt Veza has accepted the position of vice president and general manager, operations, within Encana's new organization. He will be responsible for leading the development of the STACK/SCOOP assets. Matt has been with Newfield since 2012—currently managing our assets in the Uinta, Williston, SCOOP and Arkoma. Matt joined Newfield after 16 years with Marathon.
- Byron Gale, an existing Encana leader, has agreed to become vice president and general manager, operations, for the Arkoma, Uinta, Williston and China assets. Byron is currently Encana's chief reservoir engineer—in charge of their corporate reserves group and serves as interim head of Encana's environment, health and safety team (EH&S).

- Mike Pontiff has accepted the position of vice president, EH&S, and will replace Byron in that role. Mike has been with Newfield for 15 years and currently oversees our safety, environmental and regulatory compliance team. Prior to joining Newfield, Mike spent 23 years with El Paso / Sonat.

In addition, Encana has announced plans to manage all of Newfield's existing assets from our current location in The Woodlands. In regards to our field operations, there are no plans for any significant near-term changes to our field personnel or operating structure.

We do not anticipate any other leadership or staffing announcements to occur before the closing of this transaction, and Encana plans to provide additional clarity on the organizational structure and staffing immediately after closing.

I realize you will have many questions regarding the future. Until both parties achieve equity holder approval and the deal has officially closed, much of the information you would like to have today will not be available until after the transaction is final. This much I can tell you, after closing, Encana will provide you with further clarity of your status, as your position will be designated within one of the following groups:

1. A continuing position in the combined organization.
2. A transition position that will be required for a limited time after closing.
3. A position that will not be retained.

Additionally,

- We performed well in 2018 and your performance will be recognized accordingly. We expect to pay our year-end 2018 bonuses with the closing of the merger transaction (as close to Valentine's Day as we can manage!).
- As we continue to prepare for the coming transition, I especially want to ask you to maintain your focus on execution, safety and excellence. It is essential we continue to execute and sustain momentum.
- Our stockholder meeting and the vote to approve this transaction is scheduled for February 12, 2019. Please remember to vote your shares and know that your senior leadership team and Board of Directors unanimously support this important transaction. Your vote will count. You will have the option to vote online, by phone or through the mail prior to the meeting. Please see "Important Additional Information Regarding the Transaction Will Be Filed with the SEC" below regarding where you can find more information on the transaction, the stockholder meeting and how to vote your shares.

As a last note, know that integration-related communications with Encana must be coordinated through Newfield's integration team. What does this mean?

- Any requests for meetings and information exchanges, or sharing of data and information must be reviewed and approved by Newfield.
  - Discuss any of these requests with your manager or a member of the integration team before proceeding.
  - If you receive contact from anyone at Encana that has not been routed through the integration teams, again contact your manager or a member of Newfield's integration team for guidance before responding.
